

Internet & Computer Use Policy

Internet access enables the E. C. Scranton Memorial Library to enhance its information services beyond the scope of traditional collections and resources.

The Internet is a vast and unregulated global information network that enables library users to access ideas, information, images and text beyond the Library's collection, mission, selection criteria and collection development policies. The Library does not control the information accessible through the Internet and does not accept responsibility for its content.

Computers are located in the adult and children's areas and shared by library users of all backgrounds and sensibilities. Individuals are expected to be considerate of others when accessing potentially offensive information and images. The area surrounding the workstations is "public space," and computer users are subject to the library's general rules regarding appropriate behavior in the library. To encourage a safe and appropriate environment for all users, internet filters may be employed on library computers.

Computers in the Children's Room are to be used only by children or adults who are accompanying a child. Restriction of a child's access to, and use of, the Internet is the responsibility of the parent or legal guardian.

Library staff reserves the right to enforce time limits for users to ensure that fair use of the public computers is available to all. The fee for printing is posted at several locations in the Library.

Computer privileges and/or library privileges may be suspended for misuse, abuse, or illegal use of the Internet, behavior which is disruptive to the operation of the library and/or the quiet enjoyment of the library by others, or because of other violations of this policy.
